AMONG THE HORSES.

Portraits of a Beautiful Hackney and Graceful Orloff.

A day spent among the horses is recorded with a shining mark in the memory of a lover of these grand animals, especially if he is chained to a desk in an office most of his waking hours. Such a white day the writer hereof passed lately at the Indian Neck stud, Oakdale, L. I. The owner of the farm, Mr. Frederick G. Bourne, president of the Singer Machine company, is one of those wealthy Americans who for the love of it more than for gain has engaged in the work of improving the breeds of horses in this country. Such men do not come in competition with the ordinary farmer-on the contrary, they aid him. Mr. Bourne's favorite in horseflesh is the hackney, which is the favorite also of Mr. Alexander Mair, superintendent of the Bourne stables. At present the pride of Mr. Mair's eyes is Enthorpe Performer, 4 years old, registered in the American Hackney studbook as No. 118.

HACKNEY STALLION ENTHORPE PERFORMER.

Enthorpe is considered one of the most perfect hackney stallions ever seen in America. At Indian Neck farm he is considered the best specimen. He is of the Yorkshire breed and is a bright bay, with "four white feet and snip on the nose." Enthorpe is a colt by the famous Matchless of Londesboro and resembles his sire, showing the approved short back and strong neck of the backney. In the Danegelt breed, from which Enthorpe Performer and Matchless are descended, the four white stockings, star in the forehead and snip on the nose are always looked for, they being characteristic of the Danegelts. Enthorpe is a cross of Danegelt-Fireaway blood. His dam is Peg, by Superior. His high stepping is a sight to behold.

Enthorpe is 15 1½ hands in height. Horsemen especially delight in his "action," which to the uninitiated appears to be the making of a great fuss and to do over every step he takes without getting over the ground any faster for it. However, that is the quality now demanded in fashionable carriage horses, and Enthorpe has it in perfection. His hind action is magnificent, he handling his hocks admirably. It may interest our readers to know that Enthrope is valued at $25,000. At Indian Neck it is found that hackneys quite equal to the English article can be bred in America.

ORLOFF STALLION AD.

The second illustration shows a far different though none the less beautiful animal-the Russian Orloff high school (haute ecole) saddle stallion Ad.

Like all the Orloffs, Ad is a tall horse, being 15.3. He is 8 years old. Ad is a fine model of the saddle animal. He is trained in all the tricks of the riding school or high school horse, so called, He can walk Spanish, go through all the fashionable steps and movements riders of fancy saddle stock demand and almost dance a jig. He could do that undoubtedly if it was considered the fashionable thing. Our artist has caught Ad's pose just as he is in the act of stepping out for his Spanish walk. The long, full, flowing tail, which has never been mutilated by the fashionable system of docking, adds not a little to his stately and graceful appearance. He is an imported horse, a beautiful bay, with black mane and tail, and so gentle that he was ridden last summer by a little girl.

A Foot of Air to the Pound of Live Weight. The true principle of ventilation is to let fresh air into the building by small apertures in many places and to take it out by the same principle. Probably no better simple plan could be devised than to build a box about a foot square and as long as the building, 102 feet, with an end extending out of each end of the building. This box should be pierced with numerous small holes and placed overhead in the rear of the cattle and between the two rows. This will carry out the vitiated air which rises to the ceiling. In front of the cattle at the floor on each side of the building about six openings of 1 by 2 feet and connecting with the outside air should be made. This should be covered with wire netting, say, of one-quarter to one-half inch mesh or with boards pierced with numerous noles. In front of each one of these cold air ventilators should be placed a slide, so that they may be partly or entirely closed Chicago Record. as occasion requires. It will be seen that by this method the pure air will mingle with the heavy carbonic acid gas, and as all is warmed by the animals it will rise to the ventilator at the ceiling and escape. In addition to this numerous windows should be placed in the building for light and air. Some days the. windows should all be thrown open, as it is impossible to properly ventilate a building with so many animals in it on warm ranggy days without these windows. -- Cor. Rucal New Yorker.

He might have been a brave soldier durin the war, but since I made his acquaintance I don't know of his doin anything except boosin and borrowin letter paper and stamps from our firm to write letters to the newspapers on pensions. I got sick of his comin in every day, so I put up a job on him.

I fixed a ink bottle for him special. I loaded it with fishin worms. In comes the major shakin like as if he hadn't struck a drink for a week. I got him the paper and ink and pen.

He was talkin to the bookkeeper when he jabbed his pen into the bottle and harpooned a great big rigglin worm. You ought to see him stare.

He gave a jerk and shook it on the floor and rubbed his hands. He remarked to the bookkeeper that he wasn't feelin very well. Then he made another dive, and up comes another worm, black as night, and with more life in him than if fish was bitin all around you and you wanted to bate your hook with him
